Collecting Craze I Suffer from Museomania!

Hunting and studying trips are part of the Habsburg family tradition. Intrigued by everything exotic and captivated by their passion for collecting, three young archdukes set out to travel the world in the 19th century.

Two of them have private museums in mind: for self-presentation as well as to emphasise their monarchical qualities. Franz Ferdinand clothes his imperial claim to power in the words: “I suffer from museomania!” In 1850, eighteen-year-old Ferdinand Max, the later Emperor Maximilian of Mexico, takes his first trip to the Aegean. He subsequently travels all over the Mediterranean, encourages Austria’s first voyage of circum-navigation, and visits the tropical world of Brazil. His plans for a museum never leave the drawing board. Ferdinand Max is executed in 1867.

Crown Prince Rudolf embarks on a trip along the Nile at 23 years of age in 1881. He has a deep passion for natural sciences just like his uncle Maximilian. Rudolf initiates an ethnographic encyclopedia about the Danube Monarchy and promotes a collecting journey to East Africa. A bullet ends his life in 1889. Three years later, Franz Ferdinand is 29 years old and sets forth on his voyage of circumnavigation. After the death of his cousin Rudolf, he is the next in line to the throne. Franz Ferdinand envisions the largest private museum in Vienna and dedicates the same premises to his extensive collections, which are the home of today's Weltmuseum Wien. He is assassinated in 1914.

Hunting, Collecting, Self-Presentation

In this gallery of his formerly private museum, Franz Ferdinand of Austria-Este presented his “trophies” from East Asia in 1912. The display cases he needed were made to order by the best and most expensive cabinetmaker of the time, August Kühnscherf & Sons, in Dresden. Elaborately renovated, they once again accommodate parts of the collection from his voyage of circumnavigation. All three Habsburgs acted on their wild passion for hunting and collecting in very different ways. Each of them wanted to conquer, own, rule, and subdue; at least symbolically. With the presentation of their own splendour and magnificence in mind, they kept hunting and collecting in far-away corners of the globe. Nonetheless, they were hardly interested in encountering or learning from other cultures.

He was obsessed with collecting everything, from the most meagre to the most exquisite objects he could get his hands on. In late 1892, Franz Ferdinand embarks on a ten-month voyage of circumnavigation aboard the torpedo ram cruiser Kaiserin Elisabeth. The world tour is well-organised and designed to satisfy the future successor to the throne's hunger for exotic trophies. Franz

Ferdinand dreams of establishing Vienna's largest private museum. Everything related to his round-the-world trip is preserved and filed: the travel library, maps, souvenir albums, press clippings, receipts, and telegrams. As the collection of his voyage of circumnavigation is of great nostalgic value to Franz Ferdinand, no further objects are added. At the centre of imperial power, he displays his collection as excellent publicity for his self-presentation.

"Born in green Styria and with a great love for the mountains, it had always been my deepest wish to see the King of Mountains, the Himalayas, and get to know the tropical mountain world. Although I had heard of and read much about the magnificent beauty of the Himalayas – what I was seeing now exceeded all my expectations and sent me into raptures beyond description. The light, pure mountain air alone was wonderfully invigorating – no wonder that one after the other in the carriage started yodelling, as if we were in the mountains of Upper Austria."

Das neue Hofmuseum. In aller Stille wurde der Ringstrassenflügel der neuen Hofburg eingerichtet, und den Besuchern werden bald die Tore geöffnet werden. Die Aquarelle und Handzeichnungen des Kunsthistorischen Hofmuseums bilden hier ein Kästchensmuseum und kommen bei sehr guter Beleuchtung und in vornehm einfacher Anordnung sehr schön zur Wirkung. Die Hauptstücke bilden der Melksteinzylinder von Schwibb und die Blätter aus dem Kronprinz Rudolf-Album. Dieses Vermächtnis des Kronprinzen enthält die hervorragendsten Künstlernamen seiner Zeit und zeigt auf einem Blatte von L'Allemann den Stifter als Oberstthalhaber bei einer Truppenreview in Prag. Sellenys Studien von der Weltreihe der "Novara", Marafs "Baumcharakter", Oberbecks Leidensstationen, Werke von Gekos, Pausinger, Rudolf von Alt, Mozart und andere schmücken die Räume, ferner Skulpturen und kunstgewerbliche Arbeiten. Getrennt von den Aquarellen wurden zwei Sammlungen des Erzherzogs Franz Ferdinand in der neuen Hofburg untergebracht. Die Antiken, die sich einst in der Villa Caiago bei Vadaqlio befanden, sind aus dem Modena-Palais hierher überführt worden. Sie bedeuten eine wertvolle Bereicherung und Ergänzung der Antikensammlungen des gegenüberliegenden Museums, des Theatrestempels und des unteren Belvedereschlosses. Ein Fragment vom Parthenonfries, das auf Phidias zurückgeht, wurde aus Rom und aus dem einstigen Herzogtum Modena sind ebenfalls hier aufgefertigt. Die dritte Kollektion bilden die naturhistorischen und ethnographischen Sammlungen aus dem Besitz des Erzherzogs. Sie sind nach wissenschaftlichen Prinzipien geordnet und zeichnen sich durch viele außergewöhnlich wertvolle und seltene Objekte aus. Im zweiten Stockwerke des Neubaus befindet sich die Fideicommissbibliothek des Kaisers.

The Frigate Novara off Rio de Janeiro

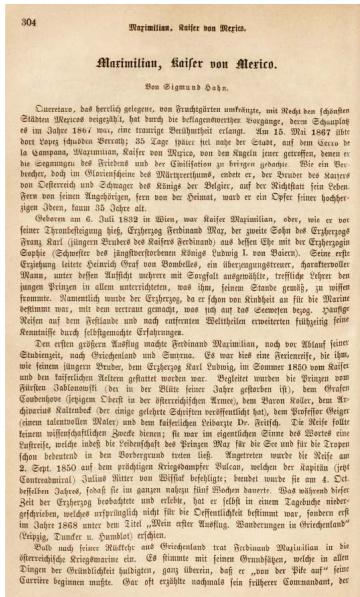

At the initiative of Archduke Ferdinand Max, the frigate Novara is the first ship from the German-speaking realm to sail around the world between 1857 and 1859. In 1864, Ferdinand Max takes the frigate to Mexico. Three years later, it transports his dead body back to Europe.

Cuernavaca, das herrlich gelegene, von Prunkgärten umgebogene, mit Reicht den schönsten Städten Mexicos deigelt, hat durch die hoffnungsvolle Ausgangsreise, deren Schauspiel es im Jahr 1857 auf der gesuchten Kreuzfahrt zu 35 Tage hielt, ins Auge der Welt, und so ist es in la Campaña, Marimbia, Kaiser von Mexico, von den Kapitänen jetzt getroffen, denen er die zusammen des Friedens und des Gleiches zu bringen gähnt. Wie ein Verbrecher, doch im Obergesinde des Mäzenverchums, ebdet er, die Brüder des Kaiser von Mexico, die beiden Prinzen, die Könige der Pölzer, auf der Rückbank freihaben. Ders von seinen Angobtungen, fern von der Heimat, wird er da sicher immer höchste Ehren, kaum 35 Jahre alt.

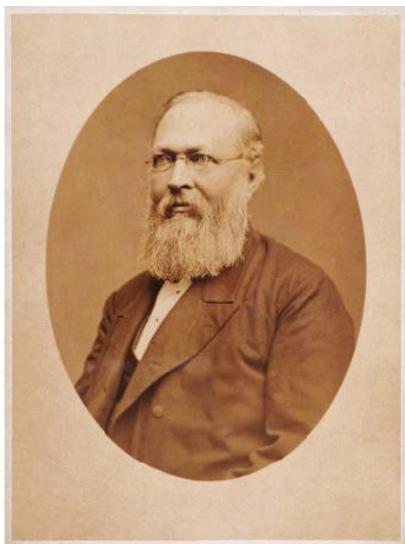

Geboren am 6. Juli 1832 in Wien, war Kaiser Maximilian, oder, wie er vor seiner Thronbesteigung hieß, Erzherzog Ferdinand Max, der zweite Sohn des Erzherzogs Franz Karl von Österreich-Ungarn und der Maria Anna von Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha, Tochter des Sophie Schöpfer des jüngst verstorbenen König Lodovico I. von Baiern). Seine erste Erziehung leitete Kaiser Karl von Böhmen, ein überzeugender, charaktervoller Mann, unter dessen Aufsicht mehrere mit Gesagte ausgestaltete, treffliche Lehren des jungen Prinzen in allen Dingen, die ihm, Ende gewiß, zu willen fanden. Maximilian wurde bei der Erziehung, so er kann uns bericht an für die Monat bestimmt war, mit dem vertant gemacht, was ich mir auf das Gewissen bring. Vierzig Reisen auf den Festlande und nach entfernten Welttheilen erweiteren häufig seine Kenntnisse durch seltzame Erfahrungen.

Den ersten großen Aufzug machte Ferdinand Maximilian, noch vor der Abfahrt seiner Kindheit, nach Romberg, wo er mit seinem Vater und seinem Bruder, die bis dahin mit dem kleinen Bruder, dem Erbprinzen Karl Ludwig, im Sommer 1850 waren, auf und den künftlichen Rittern gefestigt worden war. Begleitet wurden die Prinzen vom Fürsten Jakobsmüller (der in den Blüte seiner Jahr gebohren ist), dem Grafen Gaudenz (heutigen Reich in der österreichischen Arme, der Baron Küller, dem Adelmann Kastner (einer der ersten Sachsenhofbeamten hat), dem Grafen von Oberstein (einem talentvollen Maler) und dem österreichischen Generalen Dr. von Wartburg. Die Reise sollte einem wissenschaftlichen Zweck dienen; so war im eigentlichen Sinne des Wortes eine Reise, welche indeß die Freude des Prinzen Max für die See und für die Tropen schon bedeutend in den Vorbergebau traten ließ. Angereist wurde die Reise am 2. Sept. 1850 und endigte am 1. Februar 1851 in Romberg (heute ist der 1. Februar, Julianus) Julianus von Bissau begleitete; dessen war sie am 4. Oct. desselben Jahres, höchst im ganzen nahe fünf Wochen dauernte. Was während dieser Zeit der Erzherzog beschäftigte und erlebte, hat er selbst in einem Tagebuche niedergeschrieben, welches außerordentlich nützlich für die Geschichtschaffung war, sondern erst im Jahre 1861 in der "Reise des Maximilian einer Ausflug. Wanderrungen in Griechenland" (Wien) und in "Gambie" erschien.

Wohl nach seiner Rückkehr aus Griechenland trat Ferdinand Maximilian in die österreichische Kriegsmarine ein. Es könnte mit seinen Grundlagen, welche in allen Dingen der Gründlichkeit habligten, ganz überzeug, daß er „vor der Pforte auf“ seine Karriere beginnen mußte. Gar oft erwähnt nachmals sein früherer Commandant, der

Archduke Ferdinand Max of Austria (1832–1867)

Ferdinand Max and his brother Carl Ludwig at the slave market in Smyrna

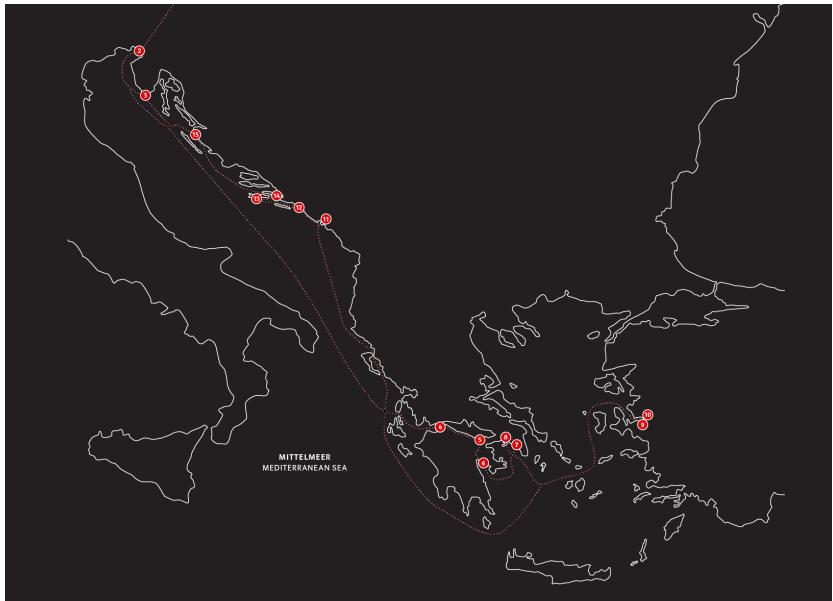

Peter Johann Nepomuk Geiger, 1850

© Trieste, Museo Storico del Castello di Miramare

Archduke Ferdinand Max already begins collecting at a young age, such as the broken-off toes of antique statues in a matchbox. In autumn 1850, he embarks on his first trip to the Orient aboard the steam battleship Vulcan. The governor of Smyrna provides him with princely accommodations. Max gets lost in the hustle and bustle of the bazaar, and captivated by the beautiful appearance of a Circassian at the slave market.

Max is overshadowed by his brother, the emperor. He craves for validation and suffers from unrestrained fantasies of power. The archduke is entertaining the idea of a private museum at Miramare Castle: assembled according to the imperial collections in Vienna with personal souvenirs. For fear of being forgotten by history, Max intends to erect a memorial in his honour: with bowling alley and shooting range.

Der Rudolf-See

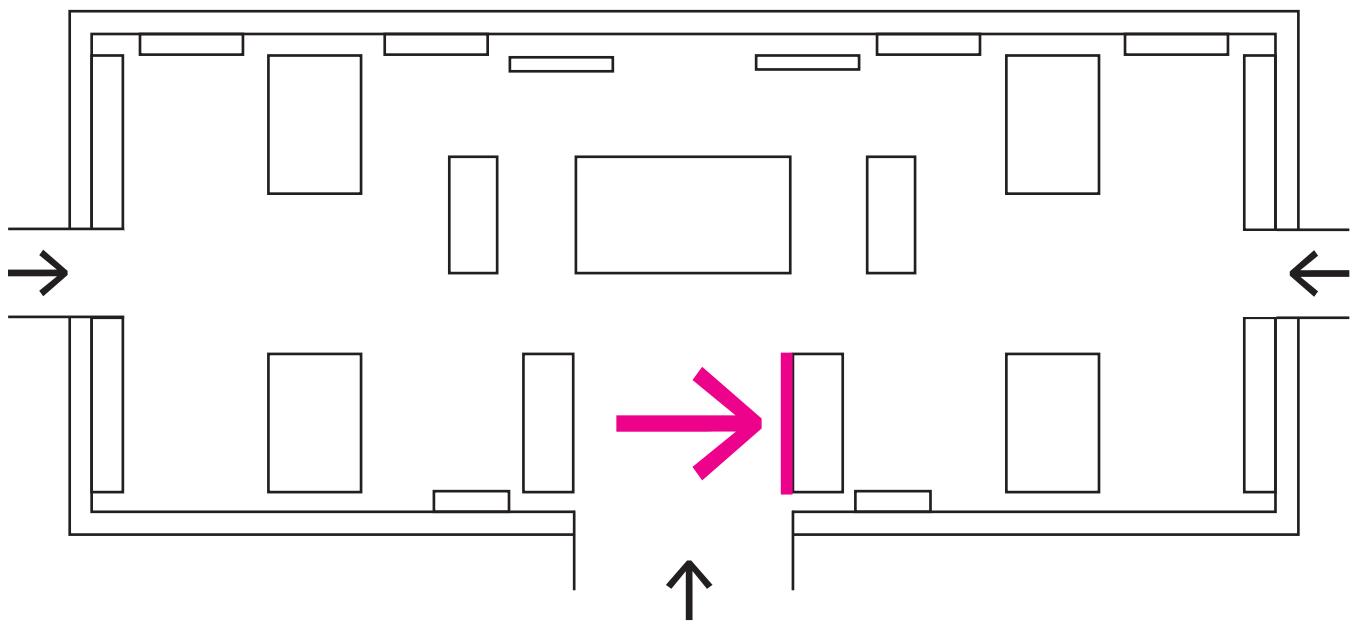

Kronprinz Rudolf ist Schirmherr der k. k. Geographischen Gesellschaft in Wien. Er macht Samuel Teleki mit dem Navigationsoffizier Ludwig von Höhnel bekannt und fördert ihre Expedition nach Ostafrika. In Kenia und Äthiopien benennen die Forscher zwei Seen, den heutigen Turkana-See und den Chew Bahir, nach dem österreichischen Kronprinzenpaar Rudolf und Stephanie.

Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria-Hungary (1858–1889)

Philae
Franz von Pausinger, 1885

In spring 1881, the passionate hunter and bird lover, Crown Prince Rudolf, steps on board the steam yacht Miramar and travels to the Nile and the Holy Land; it is a hunting and studying trip. Although he is not really a collector, Rudolf acquires antiquities by the crate as well as folklore items in Egypt. After his return, his acquisitions are immediately sent to the two court museums, in which he has only little interest.

In Cairo, the Austro-Hungarian colony presents Rudolf with a luxurious Egyptian smoking room. Years later he would furnish a "Turkish salon" at the Vienna Hofburg: as a gentleman's study decorated with a few personal souvenirs; and because of its fashionable character. Instead of establishing collections, he prefers to support an expedition to East Africa, where two lakes are named in his and his wife Stephanie's honour.

„Mein Commandant [...] begann mir zu erzählen, dass ein ungarischer Graf angekommen sei, der die Absicht habe, eine Reise in Afrika zu machen. Mich hatte es seit jeher mächtig nach dem Innern des ‚dunklen Welttheils‘ gezogen, und was war daher natürlicher als meine Antwort: Da muss ich mit! Schon am folgenden Tage sprach ich den ungarischen Grafen S. Teleki. [...] In unserm durchlauchtigsten Kronprinzenpaare [...] hatte ich mächtige Förderer meiner Absichten.“

The World-Trip Library of Franz Ferdinand of Austria-Este

Franz Ferdinand already acquires a small part of his travel library (primarily German and French literature) when preparing for his voyage of circumnavigation. Most books, above all English and Dutch ones, are added en route. Franz Ferdinand keeps a journal from day one of his round-the-world trip. Based on his world-trip library, the print version of his diary is later edited and published. In 1923/24, a total of 115 world-trip library books bearing his plate ("Ex libris Francisci Ferdinandi archiducis Austriæ Estensis") are added to the library catalogue of the ethnographic collection. In addition to 30 maps of his voyage, these books have been preserved in the library of the Weltmuseum Wien.
